This is a fictional, internally consistent document generated for the Secure Multi-Agent Enterprise Assistant dataset. It is not legal, HR, financial, or security advice for a real organization.

1. Annual leave entitlements

Eligible full-time employees receive twelve casual leave days, ten sick leave days, and eighteen annual leave days in each calendar year.

Unused balances, carry-forward rules, and local statutory requirements are administered by Human Resources. The values in this policy are the standard NexaCore demonstration rules.

Leave type	Standard annual entitlement	Notice expectation
Casual leave	12 days	At least one working day where possible
Sick leave	10 days	Notify manager as soon as possible
Annual leave	18 days	Submit early enough to plan coverage
Unpaid leave	Case by case	Manager and HR review required

2. Approval rules

All leave requests are reviewed against the employee's balance, team coverage, delivery commitments, and applicable employment requirements.

Leave longer than three consecutive working days requires both manager and Human Resources approval. The system must not auto-approve such a request.

- A one-to-three-day request normally routes to the line or project manager.
- A request longer than three consecutive working days routes to the manager and Human Resources.
- Unpaid leave always requires Human Resources review.
- An AI agent may summarize the request, but the recorded approval must come from an authorized human approver.

3. Attendance and exception handling

Attendance exceptions should be resolved using the original time record, employee explanation, and manager evidence.

The HR Agent may calculate totals and identify unusual patterns, but it must not infer misconduct from absence statistics alone.

- Salary and medical details remain restricted.
- Managers may view records for their authorized reporting scope.
- Employees may view their own leave history and balances.
